

REFLECTION 4

Different Classifications of Assessment

1. What is your significant takeaway?

My takeaway is that assessment is so much more than just giving tests and grading them. It's a complex process with various purposes and forms. We learned about diagnostic, formative, summative, and placement assessments – each with its own unique goals and contributing to the overall learning capacity of a learner and how they will deal with it.

2. How can you apply it?

I can apply it also in my own learning, I can be more proactive in seeking out formative feedback. Instead of just waiting for the summative exam, I can ask my teachers for clarification on concepts I'm struggling with, participate actively in class discussions, and even form study groups with my peers to test each other's understanding. This will help me identify gaps in my knowledge and adjust my study strategies accordingly.

As a teacher applying this onto myself is also a strategy so that when I apply it onto my teachings, I already have a guide and a reference.

REFERENCES:

1. <https://www.slideshare.net/slideshow/different-classification-of-assessmentpptx/266653286>